

Digital Arts

What Makes You, You?

Phoenix cafebar
Fri 1 – Thu 21 Mar
Free!

Using a specially-designed website and Twitter, painter-turned-digital-artist Sally Sheinman wants your answers to this question.

Using an iPad - and your answers as inspiration - she'll create a unique painting every day, resulting in at least 200 new images over the course of this six month exhibition.

You can watch the project unfold at Phoenix through an exhibition in our cafebar and via Twitter #WhatMakesYouYou?. The paintings will also be offered back to the public in a variety of ways - including free-to-download phone wallpaper and as signed prints.

As an artist, Sally is motivated by the infinite scope of the question 'What makes you, you?' and the opportunity to capture what makes people different. She is fascinated by people: their similarities and differences genetically, culturally, socially and individually. Her images are a new type of portrait.

Tell us your answer!

Go to www.phoenix.org.uk to find out more and send in your answer.

Fri 22 – Sun 24 March

Location: Festival - Phoenix cinema screens and meetings rooms.
Exhibition - Cube gallery and cafebar (free)

Festival tickets: £75 / £50 conc.

Together with San Francisco software company Cycling '74, Phoenix is hosting Code Control, its second international festival for artists and musicians to explore 'Max' software - used by composers, performers and artists worldwide to create innovative recordings, performances and digital art installations.

New artwork created specifically for the festival will be on display for all to see at Phoenix over the festival weekend.

See www.phoenix.org.uk to find out more.

CODE CONTROL
an international festival for artists and musicians

